JASON CARTER-SOLOMON JOINS LANDMARK NATIONAL BANK

Prairie Village, Kan. – Landmark National Bank announces the hiring of Jason Carter-Solomon, Senior Vice President. Jason is the newest member of Landmark’s commercial banking team in the Kansas City market, with his primary office in the bank’s Prairie Village location.

““We fully expect that Jason will not only invest in the bank’s customers, but also in our team,” said Jeff Phillips, Senior Vice President. “He is the kind of individual that you can build a team around and feel confident that they will focus on our priorities.”

Carter-Solomon brings 9 years of banking experience to Landmark, with a focus on urban redevelopment. He has a strong background in commercial real estate, with a specialization in construction financing, tax incentives and complex real estate developments. In addition, he serves the Kansas City community as a board member for the UMKC Henry W. Bloch School of Management and as the vice president of the board for the Kansas City Automotive Museum.

“I’m very enthusiastic and honored to be a part of the Landmark Team. I was drawn to Landmark because at its core, the culture here is ‘People banking People’,” said Carter-Solomon. “In an era of multi-national banking conglomerates, growing complexity and risks in financial transactions, it’s easy to lose sight of why the old fashioned ‘Community Banker’ is still necessary. Well, I believe that Banking is still a noble profession and the local community banker cannot and should not be replaced by an algorithm or a remote service center. Small businesses are the lifeblood of our economy and soul of our community. As much as our business is about the numbers, its more about the nuanced story of the individuals behind the numbers. Landmark is the type of community bank that truly embraces this, and it’s our call to arms. We take on this role in delight, we work in service to others. We aim to do our jobs well and leave people with positive experiences.”
